African Youth Day @ COP21

The Climate for Development in Africa (ClimDev-Africa) Youth Programme was established following the request by African governments and Heads of States. African Union leaders solidified their commitment to Africa's youth participation in addressing climate change, under the Malabo Declaration 2014. ACLAYP seeks to be a unique, transformative, intellectual and social platform that seeks to inspire and connect African youths to act against climate change

The "Africa Youth Day" during COP21 will be hosted at African Pavillion space to provide an avenue for African youths to showcase their climate change adaptation and mitigation strategies, projects and initiatives and stance about the ongoing COP 21 negotiations. Best practices arising from the various initiatives will be documented to an African youth climate change adaptation and mitigation best practice handbook.
